Writing Sample Guidelines

Just as an artist prepares a portfolio of representative artwork (paintings, drawings, photographs) for others to review, you are asked to prepare a sample of writing that represents your ability to engage in clear writing and critical thinking. One or more members of the faculty will assess your writing competency and determine a "pass" or "no pass."

The writing sample is a Statement of Professional Objectives, consisting of a 2-3-page typewritten, double-spaced formal paper containing a statement of the educational experiences that have led to these goals. In this paper, refer to up to three items you see as strengths that you noted in the Student Self-Evaluation sheet.

For graduate application purposes, the paper will be evaluated for the compatibility of your objectives and strengths with the program aims. This statement is given to potential host teachers as part of the placement process, so honest, polished, personal writing that would encourage someone to accept you as an intern are critical in the placement process.

Expectations for a Passing Writing Sample

In addition to looking at your treatment of content, your paper should possess the following qualities: a clear focus that is maintained throughout, adequate support (explanation and examples) that appear in substantive body paragraphs consisting of appropriate transitions, your critical thinking and paragraph conclusions; effective concluding paragraphs and technical proficiency (grammar, spelling, proofreading and polish).

In short, your writing should be efficient and readable, making it possible for your audience to read straight through your writing without confusion. To meet these criteria, you should edit (or re-edit) and polish each part of your writing. The general rubric used is as follows:

Ideas

• Unclear thesis	• Adequate thesis and ideas	• Clearly stated thesis
• Critical thinking not present	• Attempt at critical thinking	• Thought-provoking ideas
• Examples, quotes, images not used to support ideas	• Examples, quotes, images used to some extent	• Effective use of examples, quotes, images and details
